Arizona Human Trafficking Needs Assessment

- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, introduced Dr. Dominique Roe-Sepowitz and Kimberly Hogan for an update on the Human Trafficking in Arizona: Needs Assessment for Services and Training. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz provided background on the report. This project was funded by the Governor's Office of Youth, Faith, and Family (GOYFF) through the funding from the STOP (Services •Training •Officers •Prosecutors) Violence Against Women Formula Grant Program and supported by the Council. This report summarizes the results of a survey conducted on victim serving organizations in the State of Arizona regarding their services for victims of human trafficking. The survey also collected information about what victim serving agencies needed to better serve victims of human trafficking. Of the 340 social services agencies identified in the state that work with victims of crime, 100 agencies completed the survey. These agencies are spread throughout the 15 counties in Arizona. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz also noted that some of the agencies that opted to not participate in the survey claimed that they did not serve any human trafficking victims or claimed that human trafficking was not something that happened in their area. These claims can be problematic as they can perpetuate misconceptions of the reality of human trafficking victims.
- Out of the 100 survey respondents, 81% of agencies reported that they have the capacity to provide services to victims of sex trafficking. Of the 73 agencies that responded about how victims of sex trafficking learn about their agency, 81% reported that victims are referred to them by other service provider referrals, 67% reported word of mouth, 52% reported community outreach, and 51% reported self-referral. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz highlighted a gap in demographic data collection among agencies that was present in the reporting of victim's age, gender, sexual orientation, and race. Some of the biggest needs of sex trafficking resources are training, funding, and receiving referrals. When asked what type of training they agencies have received, the need for more clinical treatment for victims of sex trafficking training was identified. According to agencies who answered questions regarding barriers or fears of sex trafficking clients engaging in services, over half of sex trafficking victims expressed having a barrier or fear of engaging in services due to feelings of shame (58%), not self-identifying as a victim (58%), and having little to no social support (54%).
- Out of the 100 agency survey respondents, 29% of agencies provide services to victims of labor trafficking. Of the 29 agencies that responded about how victims of Labor trafficking learn about their agency, 69% reported that victims are referred to them by other service provider referrals, 52% reported word of mouth, 48% reported community outreach, and 45% reported self-referral. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz noted that the same gap in demographic data collection among agencies that was present for sex trafficking victims was also present in the reporting of labor trafficking victims' age, gender, sexual orientation, and race. Some of the biggest needs of labor trafficking resources are training, receiving referrals, and funding. When asked what type of training they agencies have received, the need for more clinical treatment for victims of labor trafficking training was identified. According to agencies who answered questions regarding barriers or fears of labor trafficking clients engaging in services, over three out of every four reported a lack of knowledge about resources (78%), two out of three reported having little to no social support (67%), a lack of knowledge about victim's rights (61%), and feelings of shame (50%).

- Dr. Roe-Sepowitz and Ms. Hogan concluded by reviewing recommendations based on the report: sex and labor trafficking awareness/training that is victim centered and trauma-informed; sex and labor trafficking specific screening protocols for juveniles and adults; sex and labor trafficking specific clinical treatment interventions; sex and labor trafficking specific programs for adults; social policies that provide funding support and service for adults and juvenile victims of sex and labor trafficking; and events held yearly or on a quarterly basis in a hybrid manner (video conferencing and in-person) to provide trainings, share best practices, and make connections to increase capacity to serve human trafficking victims. The full presentation can be found at <https://goyff.az.gov/meeting/htc/2021/04/07>.
- Sheila Polk thanked Dr. Roe-Sepowitz and Ms. Hogan for their work on putting together this report. She further emphasized the importance of services for victims from the perspective of prosecutors. For prosecutors to be successful over the course of the investigation and trial period, the services made available to victims during that time become crucial in maintaining their cooperation. The victims greatly appreciate these services.
- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, stated that the gaps and lack of demographic was surprising and asked if capturing that missed data is part of or stressed upon in the training that is currently being done around human trafficking. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz responded by stating that it is part of the training. However, she also noted that there continues to be an overemphasis on girls, women, and people of color that stem from assumptions made about human trafficking. The training that is offered aims to also combat this.
- Brian Steele thanked Dr. Roe-Sepowitz and Ms. Hogan for pull all the data and presenting it to the Council. He inquired if there was a plan to get this data into the hands of the places that fund training and some national groups. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz responded by stated that she will be working with Director Fuentes on a distribution strategy. She further added that the report is public and accessible to anyone; and that agencies and organizations can use the data in the report to help them in justifying the need for funding from OVC (U.S. Department of Justice Office for Victims of Crime) grants.
- Joseph Kelroy commented that funding is a primary focus for the agencies and if the agencies are not seeing clients it becomes harder to maintain and keep clinicians. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz responded by stating that they are trying to find ways in which to provide therapeutic intervention and not need a behavioral health specialist. To find this "middle ground" can often times be complicated and the concern can be alleviated with more access to funding.

Update: Children's Justice Task Force & Omnibus Bill

- Mrs. McCain, Co-Chair, introduced Rachel Mitchell, Maricopa County Attorney's Office, for an update on the Children's Justice Task Force and the outcomes from the task force that are impacting the omnibus bill. Ms. Mitchell began her presentation by providing background information on Children's Justice Task Force (CJTF). Arizona uses funding from the Children's Justice Act, which is administered by the U.S. Department of Justice Office for Victims of Crime (OVC), to focus on the investigation, prosecution, and judicial handling of child abuse and neglect. One of its primary goals is to limit additional trauma to the child. These funds are in turn used to training for child abuse investigators such as law enforcement, Arizona Department of Child Services (DCS) investigators, forensic interviewers, and prosecutors; and to fund children's justice coordinators at child/family advocacy centers, multi-disciplinary teams, and at community mandatory reporting training opportunities within Coconino, Gila, Maricopa, Pima, Yavapai, and Yuma counties. The CJTF serves as Arizona's Multidisciplinary Task Force on Children's Justice and is comprised of representatives from selected disciplines involved in handling child abuse and neglect cases. CJTF was recently tasked with conducting a three-year statewide assessment. The assessment resulted in policy, training, and system improvement recommendations for the investigation and prosecution of serious child abuse cases, as defined by federal statute.

- Ms. Mitchell then proceeded to describe the recommendations from the Justice for Victims of Child Sexual Abuse Task Force (JVCSATF) that made it into S.B. 1660, which is currently pending in the state legislature. The bill would allow criminal courts to govern a defendant's ability to contact the victim, family, or other minor children if the criminal court finds that contact with other minor children would pose a risk. Children, ages eight and older, placed in out of home care would be required to receive age/developmentally-appropriate materials about sexual abuse, trafficking, and exploitation along with the methods of reporting abuse, unless a doctor or therapist recommends otherwise. The clerk of the court shall report a listing of lawsuit filed with the court concerning sexual abuse and the failure to report. The bill also removes the statute of limitations for child sex trafficking cases, expands the positions of trust definition, limits when pro se defendants question child victims, requires the creations of social media and cell phone best practices in schools, and requires consistent mandatory reporting law training. Ms. Mitchell also reviewed the JVCSATF civil, education, and criminal recommendations that have yet to be remedied or enacted. The full presentation can be found at <https://goyff.az.gov/meeting/htc/2021/04/07>.
- Lt. Dave Saflar inquired about one of the recommendations yet to be enacted that would expand Arizona Department of Education (DOE) jurisdiction to uncertified educators and asked if educators in this context would include parents due to school closures during situations like the COVID-19 Pandemic. Ms. Mitchell clarified that the intent behind the expansion of jurisdiction would not include parents but rather those teachers hired by schools that are certified. Hon. Doug Coleman added an example of some charter schools hiring teachers without their teaching certification, which would be considered uncertified educator.

National Advisory Committee Update

- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, introduced Katherine Chon, Director of the Office on Trafficking in Persons (OTIP) at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), and Lauren Devine, Child Trafficking Prevention and Protection Coordinator at OTIP, for an update on the National Advisory Committee on the Sex Trafficking of Children & Youth in the United States (NAC). Ms. Chon began the presentation by expressing her thanks and gratitude for the participation of Arizona through Governor Ducey on the NAC. Additionally, she offered information on additional training resources for individuals and healthcare systems, and invited Councilmembers to participate in commemorating the efforts of the United States to combat human trafficking by participating in the recording of its oral history. Ms. Devine then provided background on the NAC. The NAC was established in 2017 in response to the Preventing Sex Trafficking and Strengthening Families Act of 2014. The NAC advises the Secretary of HHS and the Attorney General on policies to improve the nation's response to the sex trafficking of children and youth. In September 2020, the NAC released a set of recommendations to the states in its interim report, titled Best Practices and Recommendations for States. The interim report included 127 recommendations in 12 key areas: Multidisciplinary Response, Screening and Identification, Child Welfare, Service Provision, Housing, Law Enforcement and Prosecution, Judiciary, Demand Reduction, Prevention, Legislation and Regulation, Research and Data, and Funding and Sustainability. Each recommendation has two tiers. Tier 1 provides initial steps for states that have not yet substantively addressed the sex trafficking of children and youth. Tier 2 provides examples of practices and policies for states already working to address the sex trafficking of children and youth. After reviewing the report, each state will identify a point of contact to collaborate with government agencies, non-government organizations, and other relevant groups to evaluate their state's efforts to implement the NAC's recommendations and highlight innovative and successful work. After receiving the states' self-assessments, the NAC will evaluate their adoption of the recommendations and publish a final report on each state's progress in implementing the recommendations. HHS is available for support and technical assistance. The states' self-assessment survey to be completed and due to the NAC on June 23, 2021. Extensions on completed the assessment may be granted as needed.

Pinal Alliance Against Trafficking Coalition

- Mrs. McCain, Co-Chair, introduced Chief Richard Jessup, Chief of Police for San Luis, AZ, for an update from law enforcement partners with the Pinal Alliance Against Trafficking Coalition (PAAT). Chief Jessup began his presentation by mentioning the local law enforcement (LEO) partners with PAAT. These include police departments in Yuma, San Luis, Somerton, Wellton, Cocopah, Quechan, and Yuma County Sheriff's Department. The LEOs work closely with advocacy center to connect victims with the services they need. These centers include Amberly's Place, Healing Journey – Yuma, Yuma Regional Medical Center, and, through a personal connection of his, the Phoenix Dream Center. The LEOs have also identified some common issues within the region concerning human trafficking. They see about 22,000 people cross the US-Mexico border every day on top of the number of illegal border crossings. Chief Jessup explained the difficulty in identifying victims due to processing procedures and provided an example involving a foreign national. He stressed the importance of identifying the right services that individuals, like those described in this example, have access to but also ensuring that the law enforcement are trained to recognize the signs of human trafficking. There are also major truck routes that run through the region, connecting California and the east coast. Yuma is a geographic center for migrant workers, in which they spending half the year in Yuma and the other half in Salinas, CA. The region also sees a lot people in September during dove hunting season. Yuma is considered the dove hunting capital of the United States and the season attracts many people from other states and other countries. The large movement of people throughout the region puts a strain on law enforcement to keep a focus on human trafficking. Chief Jessup recommends that a task force be established devoted to specifically investigate human trafficking within the region. He also recommended that additional training, educational opportunities, recognition, and resources be made available to his and other departments.

- Joseph Kelroy mentioned that the Juvenile Justice Services Division of Administrative Office of the Courts is currently collaborating with Union High School to bring human trafficking education to the school and asked if he could get help getting in contact with the superintendent of school in San Luis so that they can help bring that education into the area. Chief Jessup responded by stating that he would be willing to work on making that connection.
- Tony Mapp mentioned that DPS sponsors a training that is available to not only DPS troopers but to also local law enforcement called interdiction for the protection of children. The training helps officers identify the signs of human trafficking. The training is free of charge and all the host department would have to do is find a location to hold the training. He offered this assistance to Chief Jessup.
- Brian Steele thanked Chief Jessup for his presentation and for this hard work.
- Dr. Roe-Sepowitz mentioned that in the work she is doing with Joseph Kelroy and juvenile probation officers human trafficking can occur both ways on the border, not only from those coming into the United States but also from those entering Mexico. She inquired to what extent do young people from the Yuma area cross over into Mexico. Chief Jessup responded by stating that they see an uptick in young people crossing into Mexico when the colleges are in session. It is possible for these young people to kidnapped be trafficked. He stated that it is important to spread awareness and provide educational resources to not only the young people but their parents as well.
- Mrs. McCain mentioned that the McCain Institute will be co-hosting an eight-hour law enforcement training in May that could help with the need for training of law enforcement from the Yuma area.

Workgroup Updates

- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, introduced Dr. Dominique Roe-Sepowitz for an update from the Data and Research Workgroup. Dr. Roe-Sepowitz informed the Council the Workgroup is working with Phoenix Police Department and the 10 other organization to do street outreach. The goal of the outreach is to connect victims with the services they need. They have also been working on a hotel-related response and have worked with 23 survivors so far. A number of projects are underway with special education teachers and Maricopa County probation officers.
- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, noted that Director Debbie Johnson was unable to attend the meeting and as a result there is no update from the Outreach and Awareness Workgroup.
- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, introduced Sheila Polk for an update from the Policy Workgroup. Ms. Polk informed the Council that the Workgroup met in March to review their accomplishments so far. Director Fuentes was thanked for her work in coordinating training for the Fingerprint Clearance Board. The workgroup continues to focus on identifying barriers that inhibit survivors from productively re-entering society. They have also sent out a survey to the Council inquiring input on the presentation Councilmembers would like to see the upcoming year and what policies should be reviewed. The Arizona Prosecuting Attorney's Association held a successful human trafficking training in March. It was a full day of training with participation with many Councilmembers.

- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, introduced Dr. Angela Salomon for an update from the Victim Services Workgroup. Dr. Salomon informed the Council that the Workgroup met in March and had Dr. Roe-Sepowitz Kimberly Hogan present on the needs assessment so that they may better apply it to the work of the Workgroup. The Workgroup also had Care7 from the City of Tempe to present on the integration of their services to help human trafficking victims. They also began review standardized trafficking identification tools for service providers. The next Workgroup meeting will be in May and they plan to review the matrix for navigating the identification tools and will host the Human Trafficking Specialist from DCS for a presentation.

Upcoming Meeting

- Mrs. McCain, Co-Chair, reminded Councilmembers to mark their calendars for the next Council meeting on June 2, 2021.

Special Announcement

- Director Fuentes, Co-Chair, introduced Joseph Kelroy for an announcement. Mr. Kelroy announced that Teasie Colla of the Juvenile Justice Services Division of Administrative Office of the Court is retiring. Ms. Colla has served a proxy for Mr. Kelroy on the Council and has been instrumental in establishing specialists throughout the state. Mr. Kelroy is appreciative of all of the work Ms. Colla has done over the years and thanks for her service. Director Fuentes, echoed Mr. Kelroy's sentiments and thanked Ms. Colla on behalf of the Council.
